INTRODUCTION

The President's Secretary's File is the most important of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's office files, and one of the most valuable and used document collections for the study of twentieth-century American history. Roosevelt created the Secretary's File to keep close at hand for instant retrieval those letters, memoranda, and reports he considered most important for the conduct of both domestic affairs and American foreign policy.

The fact is that Roosevelt inherited an obsolete filing system dating back to President William Howard Taft, in which most correspondence ended up in large central files. At the same time Roosevelt was accumulating an immensely greater volume of papers, due in no small part to his working habits as president. He wanted to supervise all aspects of government, particularly foreign affairs, and he encouraged members of the diplomatic corps to write to him personally and secretly. He then set up a large number of small special files in his own office to contain special correspondence and placed them under the control of his personal secretaries, first Marguerite "Missy" LeHand (1933–41) and later Grace Tully (1941–45). The files were arranged originally by year and thereunder by subject in alphabetical order. Beginning in 1933 the secretaries maintained a card file index, which is in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library and available to researchers. These files accumulated at the rate of five file drawers a year from 1938 on.

The Microfilmed Collection

The documents microfilmed for this publication come from the five principal files that make up President Roosevelt's Secretary's File (PSF). The entire PSF consists of the Safe File, the Confidential File, the Diplomatic File, the Departmental File, and the Subject File, and amounts to 70 linear feet, approximately 180,000 pages.

Safe File

This file consists primarily of security classified material related to World War II and presumably stored in the safe in the president's office. As the nation moved closer to war, the PSF came to reflect this development. In the card indices created by the White House staff, abstracts of documents in the safe were typed on blue cards and stamped SAFE. Individual folders in this file reveal formerly top secret information on American war-related agencies and departments; Allied and Axis-aligned foreign countries; and prominent individuals in public and private life, both abroad and in the United States.

The amount of correspondence increased with generals and admirals including George C. Marshall, Douglas MacArthur, William D. Leahy, and John L. McCrea. Classified documents in the Safe File bear headings such as American-British-Dutch-Australia Command (ABDA), Office of Strategic Services (OSS), and Pacific War Council.

Confidential File

This file originally was part of the Central Files controlled by the White House Office of the Chief of Files. It was filed with the PSF due to its sensitive nature. The file contains material deemed confidential and of special interest to President Roosevelt and to his advisers. Abstracts referring to material in this file are scattered throughout the president's Official and Personal Files for cross-reference purposes, as the subjects warrant. This file includes folders on the activities of the Board of Economic Warfare, the subject of neutrality, lend-lease activities, the Office of Strategic Services, the Department of State, and the War Department.

The file also contains documents from the Office of Petroleum Coordinator for War and the Office of Scientific Research and Development. Later a special collection of files stored in the White House Map Room would contain most of the files about the conduct of the war and relations between the United States and its allies. As with most White House files, however, it would not be exclusive and materials relating to war operations would still find their way into the PSF.

Diplomatic File

This file contains communications from United States diplomats in other countries, both special representatives and those occupying formal diplomatic status. Of particular significance are letters from diplomats stationed in Europe, including William Bullitt in the Soviet Union and later, France; William E. Dodd in Germany; Joseph P. Kennedy in Great Britain; Anthony J. D. Biddle in Poland; William Phillips in Italy; and Claude Bowers in Spain. The lengthy personal letters from these men, as well as those from special envoys like Sumner Welles, whom the president sent to war-torn Europe in 1940, helped shape Roosevelt's foreign policy views.

Some messages were sent directly to Roosevelt. Others were sent through the Department of State and then forwarded to the president. Certain diplomats such as Biddle, Bullitt, and Myron Taylor have separate files in addition to the files for the particular country. The Diplomatic File also contains correspondence with foreign heads of state. Special files include the Permanent Joint Board on Defense, the Yangtze Gorge Project, the military situation in Great Britain, the Orlemanski-Lange Reports on Poland, and the Saudi Arabian pipeline.

Departmental File

This file consists of material sent to the president by members of Cabinet departments: Agriculture, Commerce, Interior, Justice, Labor, Navy, Post Office, State, Treasury, and War. It should be noted that the president's correspondence with the navy, war, and treasury departments also dealt with matters of foreign policy. The navy, state, treasury, and war departments also had wartime documents of a confidential nature filed in both the Safe and the Confidential files.

These files reflect the views of Roosevelt and his Cabinet on the major policies of the New Deal and of World War II. Prominent correspondents are Henry A. Wallace and Rexford Tugwell at the Department of Agriculture, Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, Cordell Hull and Sumner Welles at the Department of State, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., as well as Henry Stimson and General George C. Marshall at the War Department.

Domestic conflicts and political problems filled the exchanges between the president and both Harold Ickes and James Farley, the postmaster general. Developments in labor union matters and the Social Security Board were filed in Frances Perkins's file under Labor Department. Relations between the White House and the Department of Agriculture showed how Wallace and his associates such as Tugwell waged the battle to save American agriculture through both the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the Resettlement Administration. There was also a steady stream of memoranda between the White House and Hull at the Department of State over foreign affairs.

Subject File

The Subject File came to the library in 1947 and was originally arranged in subjects by year from 1933 to 1945. The current arrangement is alphabetical by surname of individual, topic, or organization.

Among the important correspondence are memoranda by Roosevelt's administrative assistants. These positions were established as part of the 1939 reorganization of the Executive Office of the President to handle the proliferation of agencies and resulting increase in government business. Prominent among these personages were James F. Byrnes, Wayne Coy, Lauchlin Currie, Isador Lubin, and James Rowe. Their memoranda kept the president informed of the workings of government. The files relating to John Franklin Carter have been segregated by the publisher and have been included in a separate micropublication described below.

Another area of significant interest is Roosevelt's personal correspondence. The Subject File contains exchanges with such personal friends as Vincent Astor, Bernard Baruch, Poultney Bigelow, George T. Bye (Roosevelt's literary agent), Charles J. Cooke (Poughkeepsie architect and source of Dutchess County news), Rene DeBourbon, George H. Earle, Thomas Lamont, Henry S. Hooker, Basil O'Connor, Endicott Peabody, Helen W. Reynolds, Henry T. Hackett (Dutchess County lawyer), Henry J. Toombs, William A. White, and Walter Winchell. Exchanges with prominent public figures are also present, including Genville Clark, Helen Gahagan, Robert E. Hannegan, Hugh Johnson, Henry Kaiser, Thomas W. Lamont, Nelson Rockefeller, Dorothy Thompson, and Walter White.

Materials relating to World War II include the eight containers of reports from General Donovan of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), as well as correspondence and reports from domestic agencies such as the Office of Censorship, Civilian Defense, Facts and Figures, Price Administration and Production Management, and the War Production Board.

Significant correspondence with Congress is also located in this collection, under the subjects "Congress" and "politics." There are also a large number of exchanges with Felix Frankfurter, presidential adviser and U.S. Supreme Court justice. Important material relevant to court packing in 1937 is found under the Supreme Court subject.

The Subject File also includes President Roosevelt's finances, including some income tax records and documents relative to the estate of his mother, Sara Delano Roosevelt. Correspondence also relates to the management of his properties at Hyde Park, New York, and Warm Springs, Georgia.

John Franklin Carter Files on Nazi Party Members

John (Jay) Franklin Carter, a liberal newspaper columnist, ran an intelligence service for the president during World War II that provided him with the type of independent information Roosevelt felt he could not get from established services such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Office of Naval Intelligence, etc. It consisted of an informal intelligence unit operating out of the White House, which Carter suggested to Sumner Welles as a reward for services during the 1940 presidential election campaign.

Carter had no title. Rather, he was a government contractor who spent some five million dollars over five years of the war. He was paid through the emergency fund in the Military Appropriation Act of 1941 by Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle. His staff and budget grew as his area of intelligence-gathering widened. In early 1941 he was evaluating the stability of European government. Later he examined regions of the world where peoples displaced by war or the victims of overpopulation could be resettled. This led to the famous "M" Project in 1943. Nothing in intelligence matters was beyond Roosevelt's imagination or Carter's purview.

Carter investigated sedition among the south Boston Irish, South American attitudes toward the war, conditions in the Canadian Northwest and in Alaska, powdered milk for lend-lease, the army and navy and American schools, and Puerto Rico under Governor Rexford Tugwell. Major projects included "Sea Otter," a small freight-carrying vessel, and files on members of the Nazi party, created for the use of the president during 1943 and 1944.

His associates included a cast of colorful and knowledgeable personalities. Anthropologist Henry Field was Carter's second-in-command and head of the "M" Project. Curtis B. Munson, characterized by Carter as a "competent level-headed businessman untainted by politics," reported on the activities of Japanese-Americans prior to the Pearl Harbor attack. Two months before Pearl Harbor, Munson "…found no evidence which would indicate that there is danger of widespread anti-American activities among this population group [Japanese-Americans]. He feels that the Japanese are more in danger from the whites than the other way around." Another staff member who compiled reports on political matters was George Walker, who ran Carter's New York office.

Carter's reports began in March 1941 and continued for the duration of the war. He received information from refugees, newspaper colleagues, scholars, and embassy personnel. His contacts with representatives of American businesses abroad proved invaluable. American corporate executives provided information on conditions in countries around the world, including Axis territories. His most significant intelligence coup was persuading Ernst S. "Putzi" Hanfstaengl to come down from Canada, where he was interned by the British, to provide information for psychological profiles of Nazi party members. Hanfstaengl, once a piano player for Adolf Hitler, knew the cast of characters well.

In addition to the range of reports indicated above, Carter furnished Roosevelt with intelligence from various sources. Among the most interesting materials are those from Polish Intelligence reporting on conditions in Poland and Lithuania in 1940–42, including the status of Jews in Warsaw and discussion of camps at Belzec and Sobibor.

The PSF at the Roosevelt Library

The current arrangement of the PSF varies somewhat from the order of the White House period. The library always considered the president's papers as a single group and never interfiled them with other collections. On the other hand, the archivists did not consider sacrosanct the series arrangement as it came from the White House. They had to keep in mind the need to make the files accessible to researchers. For example, in the White House, in addition to the Safe, Diplomatic, Department, and Subject files, there were a Famous People file, a Secret file, and a Special Studies file.

The Famous People file consisted of letters from royalty and from other distinguished personalities such as Cardinal George Mundelein of Chicago. Roosevelt had a weakness for crowned heads, and he maintained a lively correspondence with King George VI of Great Britain, Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, and her daughter Juliana.

The president believed secrecy among heads of state was essential to ensure uninhibited communications with one another. For this reason, Roosevelt wrote to Library Director Fred Shipman in 1943 expressing the view that these files should never be made public. Fortunately, a surrogate court allowed the library to treat the president's letter as a request, and the correspondence with the king of England and other world leaders has been available to researchers since the early days of the library.

The Secret File contained correspondence with wartime leaders Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin, and the Special Studies File held postwar planning documents. All materials from these two files, together with documents from the Famous People Files, were integrated into the Safe, Diplomatic, and Subject files. The Churchill and Stalin files, for example, were placed under PSF Great Britain and PSF Russia, respectively. The Confidential File was not part of the original Secretary's File, but rather part of the Central Office File. Archivists placed it in the Secretary's File because of the sensitive nature of the material it contained, most of which related to World War II.

A late addition to the Secretary's File while in the White House was a series of dispatches from the State and Navy departments containing reports from foreign service personnel and naval attachés on prewar and wartime conditions in Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, and Russia. In letters of July 14, 1943 to the secretaries of state and navy and to the army chief of staff, President Roosevelt requested copies of dispatches either expressing opinions of the probability of the outbreak of war or referring to estimates of potential military strength of the above-mentioned countries. The president then had his naval aide, Admiral Wilson Brown (naval aide from June 1934 to May 1936 and February 1943 to April 1945), ship them to the library where they were to remain sealed until 1953.

Today, the Department of State dispatches are part of the PSF Confidential File, while the navy dispatches are part of PSF Navy. Since Harry Hopkins lived in the White House as an adviser to the president, the War Department dispatches became mixed with his files and are now part of the Harry Hopkins Papers, which are also in the Roosevelt Library.

Files in the PSF are not mutually exclusive. For example, there are files on the Department of State in the Safe, Confidential, and Departmental files. The same is true for the War Department. There are files on George C. Marshall in both the Safe File and the Departmental File on the War Department. Researchers should consult interrelating materials in all files to make sure they are seeing everything on a given topic.

The PSF documents cover a broad spectrum of events and people during the Roosevelt years. The Safe File and the Confidential File contain many formerly security classified papers from World War II. The original press release of the Atlantic Charter, the minutes of the ARCADIA, or first Washington Conference between Roosevelt and Churchill, as well as many items documenting White House involvement with General MacArthur's campaigns in both Bataan and Corregidor are all contained in the Safe File. The Confidential File houses significant correspondence on the working of lend-lease. Typical exchanges in the PSF include Roosevelt acknowledging Chamberlain's agreement at Munich with the words "Good man," and Ickes advising the president that he should refuse Charles Lindbergh's request to serve in the war, suggesting that Lindbergh should be buried in “merciful oblivion.” General George Patton’s message to the president transmitting the map he used during the invasion of Sicily in 1943 is also filed in the PSF.

Few documents in this collection remain closed either because of donor restriction or because of national security classification. In each file that contains closed material there is a document control card listing all donor-restricted or all national security classified documents. Wherever possible, sanitized versions of restricted documents have been placed in the files. Readers may write the FDR Library for information on closed documents.

The PSF and the Scholar

Overall, this collection is indispensable for any scholar trying to evaluate Roosevelt’s role in attacking the ills of the Depression, his charting of the course of American diplomacy before and during World War II, and his preparations for the postwar peace. Although these papers are of the highest importance in studying these problems, the PSF, like all White House materials, is never sufficient to stand alone. The papers reflect only those aspects of problems and programs that crossed the president’s desk. If a program either functioned smoothly or needed little White House supervision, there is likely to be little in the White House files. Scholars must remember that most records of agency history are housed in the National Archives. Presidential material can only be used to fill in gaps or to settle crucial points that cannot otherwise be gleaned from agency files.

It must also be emphasized that, as important as the PSF is, there are certain materials it does not contain. For example, the PSF does not contain information about conversations between President Roosevelt and visitors to the Oval Office. As a matter of conscious policy, Roosevelt did not make a record of such conversations, and only rarely is a verbatim transcript of a presidential conversation found. This is also true of telephone conversations. This does make it difficult for scholars trying to analyze the decision-making processes of the president. On the other hand, President Roosevelt believed that the publication of such detailed records of conversations between heads of state and other high officials actually might inhibit world leaders from speaking candidly with one another.

Finally, President Roosevelt was not one to write lengthy memoranda and position papers on matters of high policy. The short memorandum of two or three paragraphs or less was much more common with him. Nor was he a keeper of diaries. Even with as significant a file as the PSF, delving into Roosevelt’s mind and motives is no easy task.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

UPA's micropublication entitled President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Office Files, 1933–1945 constitute the heart and soul of the administrative record of the Roosevelt White House. These files highlight the domestic and foreign concerns of President Roosevelt and his administration. His policies, responses to crises, and plans for the future were based on information, both classified and unclassified, he received and digested from all levels of government and the public. These office files represent the materials deemed especially important by the president for content and authorship. It is hoped these office files will offer scholars invaluable insights into Franklin D. Roosevelt, the man and his administrative style.

This micropublication, encompassing the President's Secretary's Files (PSF), is very strong in representing President Roosevelt as a national and world leader, both in peace and war. These files highlight President Roosevelt's interest in foreign affairs, diplomacy, and the growing world unrest and rearmament. The focus of much material in this micropublication pertains to the growing war clouds in Europe and Asia and America's political, military, economic, and social response. There is also significant material on President Roosevelt's leadership through the Depression and recovery years focusing on the president's domestic economic, political, and social problems, plans, and programs. These materials will provide scholars with a first-hand look at the concerns, plans, and programs of the Roosevelt White House.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Office Files, 1933–1945 consists of the files maintained by President Roosevelt's personal secretary, Marguerite "Missy" Lehand, and, after 1941, by Grace Tully. The PSF consists of documents, including correspondence, memoranda, printed matter, and reports, that were deemed special and/or confidential by President Roosevelt. The documents retained by "Missy" LeHand (and Grace Tully) were arranged in alphabetical order by subject into five file groupings. These are: "Safe" File, Confidential File, Diplomatic Correspondence, Departmental Correspondence, and Subject File. The Confidential File was originally a part of the White House Central Files, but due to its sensitive nature was eventually maintained and incorporated into the PSF. This micropublication, consisting of a portion of the Subject File, is described below.

The John Franklin Carter Files on German Nazi Party Members

This micropublication, a portion of the Subject File of the PSF, encompasses the files on John Franklin Carter and represents President Roosevelt's concern for intelligence on the German National Socialist party and its members. With this intelligence, Roosevelt and his security advisers would be able to track the activities of prominent Nazi ideologues, military personages, and politicians in their efforts to garner world support for the National Socialist experience in Germany. This information was used to respond to various crises precipitated by, and promulgate U.S. policies toward, the Nazi regime in Germany. John Franklin Carter, a personal intelligence adviser to the president, was responsible for acquiring, compiling, and analyzing incoming sensitive information on the gathering war clouds in Europe and, to a lesser extent, in Asia.

The John Franklin Carter files consist of correspondence, reports, and memoranda. The majority of the files consist of biographical materials on the prominent members of the German Nazi party. These materials highlight the various aliases, employment histories, civil careers, educational levels, and military service records of German Nazis.

In addition to the dossier-type materials on Nazi party members, the Carter Files include intelligence reports on Nazi influence and fifth column activities in Europe and Latin America. The threat and disposition of Japanese-Americans, Japanese motives in Asia, and concern over the growing Soviet intelligence network in the United States and abroad are touched on briefly.

UPA's President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Office Files, 1933–1945, Part 5: The John Franklin Carter Files on German Nazi Party Members highlights the activities of Franklin D. Roosevelt and his national security and foreign affairs advisers to gather intelligence on Nazi Germany. These files will open a door to the realm of international intelligence gathering by the Roosevelt White House and will provide a treasure trove of information on the personality of the German Nazi Party and its members.

SOURCE NOTE

The documents reproduced in this micropublication are donated historical materials from the Presidential Papers of Franklin D. Roosevelt in the custody of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Hyde Park, New York. The formal title of the material used in this micropublication is: Roosevelt, Franklin D.: Papers as President, President's Secretary's File, 1933–1945.

EDITORIAL NOTE

UPA's President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Office Files, 1933–1945 consists of selected series from the President's Secretary's Files (PSF). The series included in UPA's micropublication are the "Safe" File, Confidential File, Diplomatic Correspondence, Departmental File, and Subject File.

Part 5: The John Franklin Carter Files on German Nazi Party Members consists of a portion of the materials comprising the PSF's Subject File. This series has been filmed in its entirety. UPA has microfilmed all folders, documents, and index cards as they are arranged at the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library. The files in this series are arranged into three groupings. The first consists of chronologically arranged file folders containing correspondence, memoranda, and reports on a wide range of topics. In addition, several folders are further subdivided by specific topic. The documents within each folder in this grouping are generally arranged in reverse chronological order. The second portion of the series entitled "Key Nazis" consists of dossier-type forms arranged in general alphabetical order by individual surname. UPA has made every effort to provide the full name for each individual, but many are listed only with their surname; for these individuals UPA has provided their residence or government position. The third portion consists of index card files. Several index cards have been filmed in each frame. If there is information on the back of a card or cards, it appears on the film in the exact arrangement as the front.

The following index is a guide to the major subjects of this collection. The first Arabic number refers to the reel, and the Arabic number after the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular file containing the subject begins. Therefore, 2: 0277 directs the researcher to the file that begins at Frame 0277 of Reel 2. By referring to the Reel Index located in the initial part of this guide, the researcher can find the main entry for the subject. This index contains only material from Reels 1 through 3 and the first folder of Reel 4. An alphabetical listing of the names of key Nazis can be found in the remainder of the Reel Index.
